

Properties of Nearest-Neighbor Classifiers

Peter HALL, Australian National University, Australia, E-mail: Peter.Hall@maths.anu.edu.au

Abstract: The k th-nearest neighbour rule is arguably the simplest and most intuitively appealing nonparametric classification procedure. However, relatively little is known about the manner in which this method is influenced by the value of k , or about properties of empirical selectors for k . We shall discuss these and related issues.